DEDICATION

"Glinhaven" is dedicated to my favourite gothic authors, who in part inspired the story that unfolds in the following pages: Dorothy Daniels, Marilyn Ross (aka Dan Curtis), Marilyn Harris, Victoria Holt and Phyllis Whitney. Thank you for the many hours of reading enjoyment when I was in my teens and early 20s, and for inspiring me to do the same for others.

DEDICATION

"Mind Sweeper" is dedicated to the memory of my father, Bernard "Barney" O'Toole. He was a Geophysicist, and his life's work revolved around various types of mining in all parts of the world. I learned much from him about the industry. Of all my books, dedicating "Mind Sweeper" to him seemed the most apropos. Thanks, Dad.

❖ PERSONAL ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS:

My heartfelt appreciation and thanks go out to Terrie Balmer, Palvi Sharma and James Wason from Club Lighthouse Publishing. Their welcome input and invaluable assistance brought the Bloodline Trilogy to fruition over a four-year time span. I could not have done it without them.

And last, but not least, much love to my significant other, Jerry Dalton. He was patient, understanding and encouraging during the entire process of writing the trilogy. He knew when I needed a break even if I didn't know it myself, and his offhand suggestions sometimes made their way onto the storyline. Inspiration can often be found in the unlikeliest of places. Thank you.

DEDICATION TEXT

If you have difficulty reading the dedication snapshots, text for the same are listed below.

❖ CELTIC REMNANTS

"Celtic Remnants" is dedicated to my darling mother Joyce O'Toole, who proofread everything I ever wrote and always offered creative encouragement; to my very dear friend Brendan Gallagher for his insight and humor; and to my uncle Mike O'Toole, who provided inspiration for the book in the first place.

❖ THE CRYPT ARTIST

One autumn day about several years ago, my long-time friend of more than a decade, Tracy Jon Powell – a Native American artist of much talent – talked to me about a book he was writing. The story involved the many months he spent homeless on the streets of Salt Lake City. He was writing a book about his experiences, and wanted me to help him edit a few chapters. Somehow or other, this led to a discussion about fiction writing, which is when he gave me the initial idea for "The Crypt Artist." Some of his ideas brought forth my inspiration for the storyline. While I did all of the writing, he also deserves credit for giving me initial brainwaves in the first place.

In addition, Tracy helped me define different artistic styles associated with painting. During the first edit for "The Crypt Artist," I realized I'd forgotten to define Luca's creative technique. I decided to make it mostly realism, with a touch of painterly and impressionism on occasion. But I wondered – did the style sound realistic or even plausible? In the end, I decided it was perfect for fictional purposes.

Special thanks also goes to my dear friend, Brendan Gallagher. He gave me several quirks for the character Malachy O'Leary (including the drunken lamppost scene). Malachy was based on a real man, the late Mick Egan from Birr, County Offaly, Ireland. Brendan's humorous "ideas" came from incidents he witnessed involving Mick Egan in his hometown of Birr, making them all the more hilariously funny. His re-telling of them put me in stitches.

❖ IN THE SHADOW OF THE KING

"In the Shadow of the King" is dedicated to the memory of my parents, Bernard "Barney" O'Toole and Joyce Mondoux-O'Toole, may they rest in peace. If it wasn't for them, I would have never happened upon the PBS/Masterpiece Theatre series "The Six Wives of Henry VIII" when I was but nine years old. My fascination with all things Tudor continues, unabated, to this day. Thanks, Mum and Dad.
